PRESS RELEASE

46th IARIGAI Conference:
"Advances in Printing and Media Technology"

From September 15 to 18, 2019, the conference of the International Association of Research Organizations for Information Media and Graphic Arts Industries (IARIGAI) will take place at the Media University Stuttgart - Hochschule der Medien (HdM). On three days, researchers from IARIGAI affiliates and other research institutes, universities as well as industrial research and development departments will be presenting their latest research findings.

The topics of the conference revolve around the latest developments and research results in the field of printing technologies. Besides four keynote speeches the program covers more than 25 scientific contributions in parallel tracks such as printed electronics, industrial or functional printing, color management, innovative substrates, printed wearables, 3D printing or general process improvements. "Those who are specifically interested in process engineering will love the presentations that deal with the in-situ observation of the ink transfer process in gravure and screen printing," explains IARIGAI President and Organizer Prof. Dr. Gunter Huebner from the HdM.

At the beginning of the conference a welcome reception will be on the agenda, at the end a conference dinner will provide sufficient space for the important networking. Finally, on the last day, innovative companies in and around Stuttgart will be visited.

The IARIGAI event is aimed at all representatives of universities, research institutions and companies interested in recent developments in the field of printing and media technologies. There is a reduced participation fee for IARIGAI members. Students receive a particularly favorable participation.

The conference language is English.

Registration is possible under <http://www.iarigai-stuttgart-2019.de/>. On this web site you can also find details on the participation fees and accommodation options.

The "peer-reviewed" conference papers are published in an online journal, which is also titled "Advances in Printing and Media Technology". The contents of the previous conferences can be found at <https://iarigai.com/publications/books/>

About IARIGAI

The origins of the IARIGAI go back to 1951. At that time a small circle in England developed first ideas for an international organization. Since 1957, people have met every two years, since 1997 every year. Since 2007, the IARIGAI is a registered, non-profit association (e.V.) under German law with headquarters in Darmstadt, Germany. It has almost 40 members - research institutes, universities or companies - from 20 countries, which promote research and development in the field of printing and media technologies. Each year, the international conference takes place at the site of one of the IARIGAI members. HdM Professor Prof. Dr. Gunter Huebner is currently President of IARIGAI and organizer of this year's conference in Stuttgart.
